four frontline thinkers ■ one powerful presentation

■ The Winner Effect

Professor Ian Robertson's research on the neuroscience of success and failure. Why do some people succeed both in life and in business, and others fail? Are men more likely to be power junkies than women? Success changes the chemistry of the brain, making you more focused, smarter and more confident. What makes a winner - or a loser - and how can we use the answers to these questions to better understand the behaviour of our business colleagues employees, family and friends.

■ The Talent Code

Daniel Coyle's insights into the common pattern of skill acquisition through certain methods of training, motivation and coaching. This pattern, which has to do with the fundamental mechanisms through which the brain acquires skill, gives us a new way to think about talent. What is the secret of getting really good at something?

■ How Children Succeed

Paul Tough's exploration of the character traits that define success : grit, curiosity, and the hidden power of character. Introduces us to a new generation of researchers and educators using the tools of science to peel back the mysteries of character. Traces the links between childhood stress and life success and uncovers the surprising ways in which parents do - and do not - prepare their children for adulthood.

■ Antifragile

Nassim Taleb's blueprint for thriving in an uncertain world. Many things in life benefit from stress, disorder, volatility and turmoil. What Taleb has identified and calls "antifragile" is that category of things that not only gain from chaos but need it in order to survive and flourish. Taleb's message is revolutionary: life decisions, politics, planning, finance, systems - the antifragile and only the antifragile, will make it.
